

Good Books for Problem-Posing Extensions

- Anno, Mitsumasa. 1985. Anno's Hat Tricks. New York: Philomel.
- Appelt, Kathi. 1999. Bats on Parade. New York: Morrow.
- Dee, Ruby. 1988. Two Ways to Count to Ten. New York: Holt.
- Franco, Betsy. 1999. Grandpa's Quilt. New York: Grolier.
- Giganti, Paul. 1992. Each Orange Had Eight Slices. New York: Scholastic.
- Guettier, Bendicte. (1999). The Father Who Had 10 Children. New York: Dial.
- Jenkins, Emily. 2001. Five Creatures. New York: Farrar Straus and Giroux.
- MacDonald, Susi. 2000. Look Whooo's Counting. New York: Scholastic.
- Pinczes, Elinor. (1993). One Hundred Hungry Ants. Boston: Houghton Mifflin.
- Sayre, April, and Jeff Sayre. 2003. One is a Snail, Ten is a Crab. Cambridge, MA: Candlewick.
- Schwartz, David M. 1999. If You Hopped Like a Frog. New York: Scholastic.
- Schwartz, David M. 1985. How Much Is a Million? New York: Lothrop Lee & Shepard. .
- Tang, Greg. 2001. The Grapes of Math. New York: Scholastic.
- Tompert, Ann. 1990. Grandfather Tang's Story. New York: Crowell.
- Zaslavsky, Claudia. 2001. Number Sense and Nonsense. Chicago: Chicago Review Press.

Reference: Whitin, D. J. & Whitin, P. 2004. New Visions for Linking Literature and Mathematics. Urbana, IL: National Council of Teachers of English, and Reston, VA: National Council of Teachers of Mathematics.