Representing Global Warming Discussion Self-Evaluation Rubric

	4	3	2	1
Forwards the Discussion	• I listened to other group members, and I built off what they had to say in my own comments. • I had something valuable to say in response to many of the discussion questions, and I may have included some questions or comments of my own initiative.	• My comments were insightful, and I had something worthwhile to say in response to many of the discussion questions. • I sometimes neglected to build on others' comments in giving my own responses.	• My comments were on task. • I may have repeated other group members' comments because I wasn't listening very closely. • I may have not given others the chance to speak because I spoke too much myself, or I may have hardly talked at all.	• I didn't speak, or I gave comments that were off topic.
Applies Comprehension Strategies	• I applied multiple comprehension strategies to help me understand and discuss each source. • I made connections, not only to other texts within the discussion section, but also to my own experiences and to previous things I have learned.	• I applied one or two comprehension strategies as I spoke throughout the discussion and as I viewed each source. • I made connections to other texts within the discussion section, but I didn't really try to connect our discussions to my own experiences or to things I've learned before.	• I talked about each website, but I didn't try to connect it to other websites or to my own experiences. • I didn't think about applying the strategies I learned from other lessons (such as evaluating the credibility from information) to this lesson.	• I didn't use any strategies to help me understand and compare all of the different sources.
Bases Answers in Text	• Because I viewed each website closely, I could give one or two specific examples of quotes or images from each source as I was discussing them. • I compared or contrasted specific parts of one website to specific parts of another website. • I understood the overall idea of each website, and I used this understanding to inform the discussion.	• I talked accurately about the overall gist of the sources we viewed, and I could recall a few specific details. • I compared and contrasted general ideas from website to general ideas from another website (i.e., I understood they were both against global warming).	• I talked accurately about the general gist of the subject of each website. • I did not use specific words, images, or sounds from the websites to support my comments.	• I was drifting in and out of paying attention while I was watching the sources, and consequently I did not mention examples from them in my discussion comments.
