Organization of the blog	The blog reflects pristine order. Readers can find whatever they are looking for with no trouble at all, and it's a delight to search. The table of contents is clear and helpful.	The blog is relatively well laid out, but labels or titles may be missing or the sidebar may be messy. Table of contents may be partial.	The blog is confusing; little attention has been paid to clarity or guiding the reader. Table of contents may be missing.	The blog is disorganized and chaotic. It is difficult to even tell if requirements have been fulfilled.
Writing quality	The work on the blog reflects the highest level of writing mechanics, shows independent thought and critical thinking, and goes well above and beyond the requirements.	The work on the blog is thought-provoking and interesting, but also has a variety of mistakes and is perhaps lacking depth. Only the barest minimum has been completed.	The work on the blog reflects rough-draft-level work, is full of spelling and grammar mistakes, and lacks depth.	The work on the blog is barely adequate.
Content elements	Every element is included as well as several additional elements as suggested and as invented by the writer. The content is above and beyond the requirements.	Possibly one or two elements are missing, or the pieces are not long or in-depth enough.	Some important portfolio elements are missing.	Many, if not most, elements are missing.
Reflection and response	In-depth, thoughtful reflection and a wonderful use of time and words to respond to classmates are demonstrated, above and beyond the requirements.	A complete reflection and basic responses to classmates are present.	Weak rudimentary reflection and incomplete responses to classmates are present.	No reflection is included, and the responses to classmates are poor.
