

Technology Autobiography Assignment

Write a three- to five- page narrative paper that details the significant interactions that you have had with technology during your life and that suggests what those interactions reveal about you (and if appropriate others). Your paper will tell readers what kind of technology user you are by sharing details about your key experiences with technology.

Typically, these papers are written in chronological order, but you may use other structures (such as flashback or flash-forward) if they make sense for your story. Whatever structure you choose, be sure to organize your experiences into a paper that tells the tale of how you became the technology user you are today.

Autobiographies usually use first-person, so you can use first person pronouns as you tell your story—in other words, you can use “I” in your paper.

Finally, be sure to use concrete details in your story. Use strong, specific information to make the significance of your interactions with technology clear to your readers.
