

Creating a Childhood for a Character Instructions

Your story should:

- be written in the format (short story, journal entry, or time capsule letter) that will work best for the story you want to tell.
- follow the rules for the format you have chosen.
- explain or foreshadow at least two characteristics of the adult character.
- include enough detail to make the relationship between the story about the character's childhood and the adult character clear.
- have few grammar or spelling mistakes.
